

The graph illustrates the evolution of a function over time. The horizontal axis represents time, and the vertical axis represents the function value. A red line at the bottom represents the initial state. A series of curves, colored from purple to green, show the function's evolution at different time steps. The curves are shifted to the right and have a peak that moves and changes shape over time.

